Pee Dee Farm Field Day Focuses on Latest Technology

More than 300 farmers took advantage of the Pee Dee Research and Education Field Day in Florence on Sept. 10. Clemson Cooperative Extension sponsors field days at its research centers across the state.

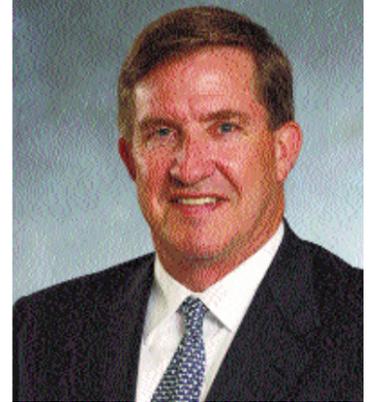

Participants could choose one or two tours that showcased various crops in the fields, along with top experts to explain the demonstrations. The first tour focused on grain sorghum, soybeans, peanuts, aphid management, and a drone demonstration. The next segment gave close-up views of vegetables, bioenergy fuels, weed management, forestry practices, cotton test plots, and a lecture on controlling feral hogs.

Test plots on 800 acres monitor crops in a variety of situations, from no irrigation to targeted irrigation, application of nitrogen, using specific amounts of lime, and many other factors depending on the crop. The results are carefully tabulated so that farmers will be better informed on which varieties to use, when and how much fertilizer and weed killers to apply, and how to better use technology in production.

Keeping producers abreast of the latest information is the basis for all the research and education centers.

Office of Agribusiness Development

A primary mission of the South Carolina Department of Agriculture is to help develop successful economic opportunities for the farmers of our state. Working toward this mission in 2015, we have to look at the road ahead differently than we would have just 10 years ago. SCDA, as well as other partner organizations, wants to help South Carolina farmers examine how this path may look for their farms.

That being said, I am pleased to announce that SCDA has established an Office of Agribusiness Development within our agency. The purpose of this office is to bring together resources for the diversification and expansion of the agribusiness industry, and enhance the quality of life in rural communities in South Carolina.

You may be asking, what exactly does this mean for our farmers on the ground? One simple answer is that we want to provide answers and assistance to any and all farmers who have a plan toward enhancing their operation.

The office, under the direction of Jack Shuler, will be focused on addressing the needs of our existing South Carolina farmers who see expansion or diversification in their future. Many of you may know Jack from his work at Palmetto Agribusiness Council or when he was with Farm Credit. Jack grew up on a farm in Orange-

TOP RIGHT: A rainfall simulator display, set up by Sustainable Grazing Lands, shows the exact amount of rainfall that runs off different types of soil, from heavily compacted to tall vegetation.

Dr. Todd Campbell explained how cotton breeding benefits farmers. He also talked about new sensor-based equipment that can collect data from the field.

Cotton and Soybean Field Day Will Be Oct. 8

A Cotton and Soybean Field Day will be held Thursday, Oct. 8 at the Edisto Research and Education Center in Blackville.

Registration is from 2:30 – 3:30 p.m., along with informal displays of agricultural posters, sensors, and equipment. Field tours will be held from 3:45 – 6 p.m. Topics include automated grain bins, sensor-based irrigation, aquatic weed management, herbicide programs in cotton and soybean, insect management, soybeans variety selection, cover crops, and sensor-based nitrogen management.

Dinner will be served from 6 – 7 p.m., with remarks by Dr. John Mueller, director of Edisto REC. Pesticide and CCA credits will be available after the tour.

Sustainable Small Farms Course Offered

Have you ever thought of starting a small farm or creating a more sustainable backyard?

Sustainable Small Farms & Backyards is a five-week Clemson Extension program that encompasses:

- Beekeeping
- Livestock (pigs, goats & chickens)
- Small Fruits
- Vegetable Production
- Composting with Black Soldier Fly Larvae
- Building Healthy Garden Soil
- Field trip to a few thriving farms on Johns Island

There are no prerequisites for this course. While the class is geared to small farms -- from suburban backyards up to 10 acres -- participants don't have to own land to attend.

Classes meet every Friday from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. from Oct. 16--Nov.13. Classes will meet at North Charleston City Hall. Class space is limited.

The registration fee of $175 covers five classes, lesson materials, and a field trip. Early registration is recommended. Two SC pesticide re-certification credits will be available.

Contact Amy Dabbs or Zack Snipes at 843-722-5940 ext. 122 or zbsnipe@clemson.edu.

CAFLS Alumni Tailgate, Celebrate Ag Game

Clemson faithful will gather to celebrate agriculture and mingle with old friends at the College of Agriculture, Forestry and Life Sciences (CAFLS) tailgate and the Celebrate Ag Game on Saturday, October 10 before the Tigers face off with Georgia Tech.

The CAFLS Ag Alumni tailgate is the largest non-athletic alumni event on campus with more than 2,300 fans, students and alumni in attendance. This year the Certified SC Tasty Tailgate, inside the Alumni Tailgate, will be bigger than ever and will give fans the chance to sample a wide variety of SC Grown specialty foods and other SC commodities.

Look for representatives of the SC agricultural industry on the field and watch special in-stadium videos highlighting the great things that agriculture does for our state. Tailgating will start three hours before the game. For more information or to purchase lunch tickets, visit:www.clemson.edu/cafls/alumni/tailgate.

Agricultural Tour Showcases Ag Diversity

The tours offered by the SC Agricultural Council take people to interesting sites all over the state. The Upstate trip in September was one of the best ever, according to SCDA's tour organizers Jackie Moore and Laura Lester.

First was a visit to TR Potts Performance Horses near Fountain Inn. This brand-new training barn—which focuses on American Quarter Horses—features an impressive barn, a large covered arena, and a state-of-the-art computerized horse walker. Potts relocated his operation to South Carolina from Connecticut last year.

Next was a visit to the Bart Garrison Agricultural Museum in Pendleton, which offers a historic perspective on farming that dates back nearly 200 years. The grounds of the museum also feature many interactive displays.

After a delicious lunch catered by Smokin' Pig, the group had two stops at Clemson University. First, master cheese maker Anthony Pounder demonstrated the step-by-step process of producing Clemson's famous blue cheese, which takes about six months.

A climb to the top of a building led to a greenhouse that houses innovative aquaculture and aquaponics research. Dr. Lance Beecher explained that not only can he raise tilapia, but the waste water from the tanks is used to fertilize a variety of vegetables in the greenhouse.

The last stop was Happy Cow Creamery, where tour-goers took home lots of fresh produce and locally grown food items.

ABOVE: Kevin Harbin shows visitors his recently restored 1950s-era Farmall tractor. It is located beside a 1929 Fairbanks Morse Diesel engine that was originally used to run a cotton gin.

FAR LEFT: The Garrison Museum houses a number of interesting farm implements dating as far back as 1820. Many of the exhibits are interactive. For those interested in the development of technology over the years, the outdoor exhibits showcase historic machinery that revolutionized agriculture in South Carolina, and the world.

Implementation of Farm Bill Programs to be Discussed

USDA's Natural Resources Conservation Service in South Carolina will hold its next State Technical Committee meeting at 9:30 a.m. Thursday, Oct. 15 to discuss diverse conservation issues of critical importance to the state. The meeting will be held at the South Carolina Forestry Commission, 5500 Broad River Road, Columbia.

Conservation priorities are critical to partners, farmers and forest land owners. This committee offers recommendations on the delivery of Farm Bill conservation programs. Committee members include representatives from federal and state agencies, agricultural producers, nonprofit organizations and agribusiness.

Topics include timelines for 2016 signups, funding and goals, and implementation of Farm Bill programs. Anyone who is interested in conservation and natural resources may attend.

These meetings are open to the public. Please confirm attendance no later than October 12 to Sabrenna.Bryant@sc.usda.gov. For more information about this committee, visit www.nrcs.usda.gov/wps/portal/nrcs/main/sc/technical/stc/

Pesticides Collection Date Set

The South Carolina Department of Agriculture is partnering with Clemson University Edisto Research and Education Center to accept unwanted or unused pesticides on Oct. 8 from 11 a.m. – 5 p.m. This free collection event will be held at the Cotton and Soybean Field Day at the Edisto REC in Blackville.

The pesticide and chemical collection program is open to all pesticide applicators in the state as well as homeowners. SCDA staff will be on site to monitor pesticide collection.

Pesticides may be dropped off without attending the field day activities. For more information regarding pesticide collection, contact SCDA Consumer Services Director John Stokes at 803-737-9696 or jstokes@scda.sc.gov.

Agribusiness Development

burg and is well prepared for this task. He will be working to seek additional opportunities in value-added processing, packaging, distribution, and more.

The Office of Agribusiness Development has two main goals. First, it will assist existing farmers who are considering expansion or diversification, or who want to add value to their crops through processing. Second, it will match agribusiness processors with our farmers to meet their supply needs.

This new office is just part of the ongoing efforts to reach our 50x20 goal of increasing South Carolina agribusiness's economic impact to $50 billion by the year 2020. Currently, the industry generates $41.7 billion in annual economic impact to our state and more than 210,000 jobs.

These are impressive numbers, but we don't want to stop there. South Carolina agribusiness has tremendous potential for growth, and SCDA aims to take advantage of every prospect.

While SCDA is pleased to announce the establishment of the Office of Agribusiness Development, we are not alone in devoting more efforts to assist our farmers. Clemson University Extension is putting together a very impressive team of experts to focus on the agricultural financial realm. I've met and visited with these individuals, and I'm very excited about this group of specialists and the positive impacts they are making in the ag industry.

As the Number 1 industry in South Carolina, agribusiness is vital to our state's future. We hope that you will embrace this new initiative we are taking to increase agribusiness opportunities throughout the state. To learn more about the new Office of Agribusiness Development at SCDA, please visit SCAgribusiness.com and let us know your thoughts.

State of Fair

Agriculture is Vital Part of State Fair

The South Carolina Department of Agriculture continues its long-standing tradition of participating in the SC State Fair. Visit us in our new location in the Ellison Building, Oct. 14-25, to experience the broad reach of our state's agriculture.

We will have a booth just inside the building, where SCDA staff members can answer your questions about agriculture. Visit our booth for daily schedules of ag events. You can also talk with various commodity groups and shop for SC specialty foods.

Chefs from across the state will take part in daily cooking demonstrations to show how you can incorporate Certified SC Grown produce and products into every day meals. The Chef Ambassador program has been one of our most successful ways to showcase local foods.

Representatives of the state's commodity boards will have their own booths inside the building. The schedule is as follows:

Cotton: October 14-16
Watermelon: October 17
Peanut: October 20-22
Beef & Cattle: October 20-21
Agritourism: October 23-25
Equine: October 23-25

The department will also have a tractor and other equipment on display. For more information on the SC State Fair, visit scstatefair.org.
